Welcome to the new week

This week's focus is on homework and we will be working hard this week to ensure that our Homework arrangements now become an integral part of our Remote Learning provision. It is important that children become used to working from within their Google Classroom so that, if they were to self-isolate, they could easily and quickly continue their classroom learning at home. For this reason, we plan to always assign homework tasks in Google Classroom. These homework tasks will, of course, continue to be introduced to children in the classroom. We hope that the children will learn to work in a truly blended way; learning in both the Google Classroom and their real classroom each day.

In order to refine our homework offer, we'd like your views. Please take 5 minutes to have your say by completing the survey here. Homework Survey
Your voice is important and will help to shape our offer to your child.

GET CAUGHT READING!

Your child will be reading a great deal in school this year. We have already completed our first reading assessment of the year, to help us to understand what your child needs next to develop their reading skills. We will allow children to bring home reading books, which will then be sanitised and placed in quarantine when they return to school. Reading at home should be recorded on your child's Class Dojo portfolio please. Simply log the name of the book, page numbers and any comments.

myON

More than ever, we are committed to children reading but know that some of you may be reluctant for them to read paper books. We have continued to subscribe to myON, which allows your child access to a wide range of digital reading books.

#schooleveryday

We will liaise with you individually if you believe your child is too ill to attend school and so, request that you call Miss Sutherland in the office. Obviously, there are also times when we may have to request that your child stays at home. This won't impact upon your child's attendance, but other absences will. It's vital that your child is in school - please call and discuss any possible absence with Amy Sutherland who will advise on our latest rules.
